

Katelyn is a VCU graduate and a Richmond City Resident who is a certified community health education specialist (C.H.E.S.). She has been working with VCU since 2011 on various social and behavioral health research projects. She works with researchers and community partners to bring cancer research focused activities to various areas across the state.

In her role at Massey Cancer Center, she manages the Community Engagement in Research, which includes the Cancer Champs program. This program provides training to community members and opportunities for community to collaborate with cancer researchers at VCU.
