

Dr. Annie Williams has over 25 years' medical experience working first in private practice and now in public health. She was sole proprietor of Contemporary OB-GYN Associates providing Obstetric and Gynecologic services to the greater Tidewater community until retiring in 2016. She joined the Virginia Department of Health in 2017, serving as Deputy Director in the Norfolk Public Health Department.

She earned her Bachelor's Degree from the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, PA and her Doctor of Medicine Degree from the Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk, VA and completed her internship and residency in Obstetrics and Gynecology at Eastern Virginia Graduate School of Medicine in Norfolk, VA.

In her current role as Deputy Director for the Norfolk Health District, she oversees a range of programs and activities directed at the mission of promoting and protecting the health and well-being of the Norfolk community. Her responsibilities include informing and educating the public about preventive health interventions and supervising a team of Clinicians ensuring access to health services including direct care in Family Planning, Immunizations, and Communicable Diseases.

A strong proponent for prevention and population health, her current activities include oversight of Medication Services providing treatment of patients with HIV and providing medication to prevent HIV.

Dr. Williams is a member of the Historic Queen Street Baptist Church in Norfolk, VA. She is the proud mother of two adult children.