Senior Vice President, AARP

Kamili Wilson has more than 20 years of demonstrated experience devising and implementing highly effective brand awareness and social marketing campaigns for Fortune 50 companies and leading non-profit organizations.

Currently, she serves as AARP's Senior Vice President of Affiliate Integration Services and is responsible for ensuring the successful transition and integration of newly affiliated entities to optimize AARP's mission, ensure business alignment and drive performance excellence. Ms. Wilson and her team serve as key strategic and implementation advisors to affiliate leaders and their respective management teams on critical issues related to integration (front-end and back-end), growth, scale, and sustainability.

In 2019, Ms. Wilson founded Menopause Made Modern by Claret Circle to address a gap in information and resources for women of color navigating the various stages of menopause transition. Through content sharing, storytelling, and community-building, she's working to increase diverse representation in the menopause space, and help women feel more informed (and empowered) to better manage their own experience. Currently perimenopausal, she first began experiencing related symptoms in 2016 at the age of 43.

Ms. Wilson is a graduate of the University of Virginia, where she earned a B.A. in English Literature. She currently serves on the Board of Directors for the Society to Improve Diagnosis in Medicine (SIDM). Ms. Wilson previously served on the Executive Board of the National Board of Medical Examiners (NBME). She is also a former executive board member for the Arlington Retirement Housing Corporation (ARHC) and a former member of DoSomething.org's Corporate Advisory Board.
